Re-energize. Learn new tools. Network with the best minds in student leadership!

What's in it for you?

The National Conference on Student Activities features proven techniques, tools, principles, and competencies for addressing leadership and management challenges in public and private educational organizations. Hear from world-class organizational leaders as they share proven research, standards-based approaches, and best practices for developing student leaders. Learn tools, techniques, and principles to enhance your leadership skills, your decision-making competencies, and how to engage, develop, and teach students. Learn from the experiences of Dr. Earl Reum Award winners and other recognized leaders. Determine what it takes to be best-in-class and how to build the requisite competencies among your student leaders.

Whether you are developing a new student council organization, developing your state organization, planning workshops, teaching student leadership, planning student activities or honing your own leadership skills., you won't want to miss this exciting event!

What's in it for your students?

The more you learn about student activities and leadership training, the better it is for your students. Having a variety of ideas you can use for classes, conferences and camps makes it possible for you to do a better job, and create more meaningful learning opportunities and activities for your students.
